

The Climate Change Show

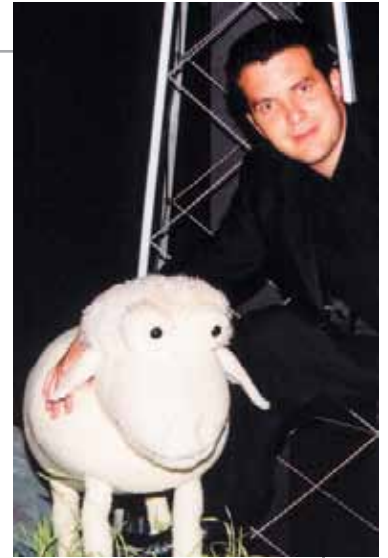

Object Theater

Connecticut Science Center, Hartford, Connecticut (2009)

Singapore Science Center, Singapore (2008)

Glasgow Science Center - Glasgow, Scotland (2004)

Science North - Sudbury, Ontario (2002)

The Climate Change Show is a disarming, sometimes frank and sometimes humorous, experience about climate change. It makes the science and the environmental impacts clear as day.

A sheep, aptly named Sheepie, is very concerned about climate change and isn't afraid to let the audience know. Sheepie is brilliantly voiced by Canadian TV personality Rick Mercer, who's signature rant-comedy style works to disarm the audience and allows the show to make some very serious points about climate change. While Sheepie pulls no punches in making his points, the focus of the show is not just on the problems. Inspiring examples are given of the positive steps people are taking to minimize our collective impact on the planet.

Sheepie's passionate, personal explanations are made all the more compelling with vivid object theater effects.

Media Solutions

Custom animation

Multiple screens

Visually rich set

Globe dome screen

Faux fire silk flame effects

Automated props

Full range of environmental effects:
rain, wind, lightening, and thunder!

Footprint 1,500 sq. ft.

Seating 15-30 guests

Value $600,000

